DETAILED ACTION

VAGUENESS AND INDEFINITENESS

Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

In claim 1, line 1, the status of a living organism is stated as the claimed process. In the actual claim steps there is neither a living organism limitation anywhere nor any indication of a status. The claim is therefore vague and indefinite as to whether the preamble or the actual claim steps control the metes and bounds of the claim practice. Clarification via clearer claim wording is requested. Claims which depend directly or indirectly from claim 1 also contain this unclarity due to their dependence.

Claims 10 and 12 are additionally vague and indefinite in that they cite "said sampled cells" in line 1 but no antecedent basis is present for such "said" cells. Clarification via clearer claim wording is requested.

PRIOR ART

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1, 3-5, and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Vale et al. (P/N 6,410,687).

Vale et al. Describes the screening and identification of agents having effects on a cell cycle in the abstract involving contacting microtubules. This is further summarized regarding microtubule practice in the section entitled SUMMARY OF THE INVENTION in columns 2-4. Imaging of microtubules and proteins are depicted in Figure 7, for example, as summarized in column 10, lines 39-57. Various agents which have effects of interacting with microtubules and proteins therewith are described in the reference in column 10, line 61, through column 19, line 24, with various assay methodologies. In particular the detection methods include the specie of video microscopy as described in column 19, lines 34-64. Labeled or unlabeled microtubules are therein described as visualized along with depolymerizing or severing proteins. This describes the pattern imaging as in the instant claims. Both intact and depolymerized microtubules are stated therein as being visualized which describes the comparison between imaged patterns in the instant claims and historic (or intact) microtubules prior to depolymerization.

Thus, it would have been obvious to someone of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the instant invention to utilize the video microscopy for imaging microtubule patterns with depolymerizing proteins to determine pattern changes as compared to historic phenotypic patterns as in the instant claims because Vale et al. suggests this particular specie of detection method for microtubule pattern recognition.

No claim is allowed.
